

TESTIMONY ENDED IN TRIAL OF HENRY

Jurors Excused Until Monday,
When Case Will Be Given to Them for Verdict.

Testimony in the case of John William Henry, former member of the bankrupt firm of Lewis Johnson & Co., bankers and brokers, on trial before Justice Siddons in Criminal Court No. 2, charged with the embezzlement of $41,689 from Mrs. Isabella Barkley, of Wayne, Pa., who entrusted checks to him for investments in shares of Mexican petroleum stock, was concluded today.

Arguments on the prayers to be submitted to the jury were heard by Justice Siddons this afternoon, the jury being excused until Monday. It is expected that the case will go to the jury late Monday.

The last testimony was in the form of written evidence to the effect that Mr. Henry actually executed Mrs. Barkley's order for the purchase of the Mexican petroleum stock, the evidence being in rebuttal.

A memorandum book containing entries mentioning Mrs. Barkley's name and the purchase of 200 and 300 shares of Mexican petroleum stock on October 28 and 30, 1912, respectively, was the evidence produced by counsel for the accused broker at the close of the testimony. The book in question was found by the trustees in bankruptcy of Lewis Johnson & Co. and its finding was conceded by the Government prosecutors.

The United States Attorney and his assistant, James E. Archer, will make the closing arguments for the Government. The closing arguments for the defense will be made by Mr. Morris Wampler, attorney, while former Justice Daniel former Assistant United States Attorney, will argue in defense of Mr. Henry.

Days of '49 Back In Alaskan Town

Construction of Government Railroad Causes Flourishing Town To Spring Up.

Construction of the Government railroad in Alaska has almost brought back the old days of the gold rushes to California and Alaska.

Just sixty days ago the pioneer construction party under Lieut. Frederick Meers, established headquarters at an anchorage in Fish creek, on Cook Inlet. This is midway of the line, and construction will move in both directions.

Today Anchorage, where the Meers party landed, is a flourishing town of 2,000 inhabitants, growing every minute. It is on Government land, and townsmen are crowding the Government station, wharves, and supply stores, with shacks, stores, boarding houses, and real live hotel.

Consequently surveys of the site are being made, and it will be divided into town lots. As soon as the survey is completed, an auction will be held, and these lots will go to the highest bidder.

Actor Bob Hilliard May Head Big Brewery

NEW YORK, June 25.—Is Robert Hilliard, the actor, to forsake the footlights for the role of President of the breweries established by the late James Everard, his wife's father? If so, he is keeping back confirmation of the report until he is actually elected.

At a meeting of the directors of the Everard breweries, in which Mrs. Hilliard has a very large interest, it is understood that Mr. Hilliard will succeed his mother-in-law, Mrs. Mary M. Everard, nominal head of the company, as President.

"I've not had a vacation in seventy-five years," he declared, "so now I am going to take one."

"JUMBO," 512-POUND BOOKMAKER, DEAD

Vainly Spent Hundreds of Pounds
In Patent Medicines To Reduce Weight.

LONDON, June 25.—Every great city has its minor celebrities who are quite unknown to the ordinary middle class person, although their appearance and deeds may be canvassed by thousands. Death brings them fame to the outside world.

Such a one has just passed away in the person of William Eccleston, known to the world of bookmakers, publicans, busmen, cabmen, and costermongers as "Jolly Jumbo." He weighed 512 pounds. He had spent hundreds of pounds on patent medicines to reduce his weight, but became resigned to the inevitable about ten years ago, recognizing that his case was hopeless. He was a voracious eater, his favorite dish being boiled salt pig's head.

He was a ready money bookmaker who knew his educational deficiencies and kept a clever staff to do the clerical work. Years ago Jim Mace, the famous pugilist, was one of his "rounders."

You Know That—

It does not take great penetration to realize that however valuable the Sunday morning papers may be considered as advertising mediums they leave much to be desired.

The immense bulk of mere paper, the great number of "sections," the endless and often meaningless "features" complicate and minimize the advertiser's message, even though readers are really interested — and that wasteful burden of duplication adds needless expense in many cases without increased returns.

Recognizing these handicaps, advertisers will do well to give serious consideration to the signal advantage of The Sunday Evening Times, which engages the reader's attention under more favorable conditions, and cannot fail to leave a clear-cut, vivid impression of the advertiser's appeal for Monday's shopping.
